Loudenbeck Respects Process, Maintains Message

Clinton, WI – September 21st, 2010– Republican Candidate for 45th Assembly District, Amy Loudenbeck, released the following statement in response to Jeff Klett’s request for a recount.

“This morning, one of my primary election opponents, Jeff Klett, has formally requested a recount in the September 14th primary election for 45th Assembly District. This primary reminds us, above all, that every vote counts. I appreciate the tremendous amount of work that Mr. Klett and his team have put into their campaign, as we all have. That is why I sympathize with his request to make sure every vote is counted accurately. I know the Rock County Clerk’s office and the volunteers performing this work will move both swiftly and accurately to confirm the results. During the recount, I will continue to visit friends and neighbors throughout the district and ask for their support in the November election.”

Amy Loudenbeck entered the race for 45th Assembly District at the end of April, months after her primary opponents. Amy’s late entry to this race made her an underdog but her promise to fight for everyone in this diverse district quickly caught on and resonated in every town, village, and city. Amy believes that a representative’s job is to do just that: represent their own district; she made that belief a central theme in her campaign with the slogan “your district, your future.”
